The Power of Protection

Facing the future

Hong Kong Report
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Foreword</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Key findings</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Family matters</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Financial ups and downs</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Let’s talk</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Practical steps</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The research</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Foreword

We rarely take the time to reflect and realise what’s good in our lives.

For most of us, it is our families – the main source of our happiness and our sense of belonging.

This report looks at how much family members support and depend on each other and how financially secure people are feeling.

While some people are managing well financially, others are just about managing. Many are supporting both their children and their parents, often making sacrifices in time and money.

Despite these strong connections, many people have not had important family conversations about their long-term financial security if something life-changing were to happen to them. Even fewer have plans in place to help their family cope with the unexpected.

I hope that this report will encourage you to think and talk about what makes your life good today and what you can do to secure your family’s future.

“Many people have not had important family conversations about their long-term financial security.”
Key findings

73% of people say their family’s health and wellbeing is the most important thing to them for the future

79% of people supporting someone financially say their family would not manage well if they had to significantly reduce their support to them

47% of people with grown-up children (over 18) are giving them regular financial support

66% of people supporting someone financially do not have insurance that would pay them a regular sum if they had a serious illness or accident which prevented them from working

73% of people with living parents are giving them regular financial support

24% of people supporting someone financially have never had a conversation with anyone about long-term financial security if something were to happen to them

66% of people with children would choose paying for their child’s university/higher education over their own retirement fund

38% of people supporting someone financially feel they themselves are just about managing or not managing at all well

The Power of Protection Facing the future
Family matters
What’s good?

What’s most important for the future?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Option</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>My family’s health and wellbeing</td>
<td>73%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Providing for my own or my family’s future financial security</td>
<td>38%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Achieving my and my family’s aspirations</td>
<td>27%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Family is a huge part of our lives and a source of great happiness.

Nearly three-quarters (73%) of people say that their family’s health and wellbeing is the most important thing to them for the future.

Almost two in five (38%) say that providing for their own or their family’s future financial security, and 27% achieving their own or providing for their family’s aspirations, are the most important things.

Q: What’s most important to you for the future? (Base: All)

The Power of Protection  Facing the future
Family is for life

Putting family first often means providing regular financial support to them.

Three-quarters (75%) of people are giving regular financial support to someone in their family.

More than four in five (86%) are supporting their children under 18 financially. Just under half (47%) of those with grown-up children are supporting them financially.

Nearly three-quarters (73%) of people with living parents are providing regular financial support to them.

Providing regular financial support to the family

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Percentage</th>
<th>Support Type</th>
<th>Base Details</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>75%</td>
<td>to someone in their family</td>
<td>All</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>86%</td>
<td>to their children under 18</td>
<td>All with children of any age</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>66%</td>
<td>to their children of any age</td>
<td>All with children of any age</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>47%</td>
<td>to their grown-up children (over 18)</td>
<td>All with children of any age</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>73%</td>
<td>to their parents</td>
<td>All with parents</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>41%</td>
<td>to their partner</td>
<td>All with a partner</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*Q: Are you giving regular financial support to any of the following? A. Someone in their family (Base: All), A. Children any age (Base: All with children of any age), A. Parent or partner’s parents (Base: All with parents), A. Partner (Base: All with a partner), Children under 18 (Base: All with children under 18), A. Children over 18 (Base: All with children over 18)
Family commitments

Providing this level of support for family members can take a toll on people’s finances, lifestyle and emotional wellbeing.

People regularly supporting someone financially in their family are spending 48% of their disposable income on others.

Among those with children under 18, nearly two in five (39%) of their disposable income and almost half (48%) of their non-working time is spent on them.

Even people financially supporting grown-up children spend over a third (36%) of their disposable income on them and 30% of their non-working time doing things for them.

People financially supporting parents are spending lower proportions of their disposable income (27%) and non-working time (28%) on them.

The Power of Protection
Facing the future

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Support type</th>
<th>% of disposable income</th>
<th>% of non-working time</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Supporting children under 18</td>
<td>39</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Supporting grown-up children</td>
<td>36</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Supporting parents</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Q. In a typical month, after you’ve paid your bills and necessary outgoings, what proportion of your remaining income do you spend on? Please exclude money that you may be saving or investing each month for you or others. Q. In a typical month (excluding work/employment), approx. what proportion of your time do you spend doing things with or for? (Base: All providing regular support to children under 18, all providing regular support to children over 18, all providing regular support to parents)
Supporting family members financially can be a strain as well as a source of satisfaction.

More than a third (35%) have put off their own aspirations to support others and feel guilty spending money on themselves instead of using it to help their family.

However, over half believe that they are a good provider for their family (53%) and more than a third (35%) feel appreciated for the support they give others.

Q. To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements?
A. Agree somewhat or strongly (Base: All providing regular support to someone in their family)
Financial pressures

Supporting family members can come at a cost.

Nearly two in five (37%) people financially supporting someone in their family say they have less money to do what they want and more than a quarter (26%) had to cut back on treats for themselves.

Nearly a fifth (18%) had to withdraw money from their savings or investments to support their family.

Nine per cent have taken on more debt to enable them to support their family financially.

Financial impact of providing regular financial support to someone in the family

I’ve got less money to do what I want to do
- 37%

I’ve had to increase my hours or take on a full-time job
- 13%

I’ve had to cut back on treats for myself
- 26%

I feel financially drained
- 13%

I’ve had to withdraw from my savings/investments
- 18%

I’ve incurred more debt
- 9%

Q. What financial impact, if any, has providing this support had on you? (Base: All providing regular support to someone in their family)
Life support

Providing financial assistance to family members can mean covering costs in areas which may not have been anticipated.

People are supporting their grown-up children with everything from education (52%) to everyday living costs (47%) and medical and dental care (30%). However, more than three-quarters (77%) of parents believe their grown-up children should stand on their own two feet financially.

The most significant way that people financially support their parents (72%) is with everyday costs such as utility bills, buying groceries and home repairs.

47% of people with grown-up children are giving them regular financial support with...

- Education: 52%
- Everyday living costs: 47%
- Medical/dental care: 30%
- Saving to help them buy a home: 19%
- Holidays: 19%
- Social care: 17%

73% of people with parents are giving them regular financial support with...

- Education: 73%
- Everyday living costs: 28%
- Rent/accommodation: 28%
- Medical/dental care: 24%
- Rent/accommodation: 19%
- Holidays: 19%
- Social care: 17%

Q. Are you giving regular financial support to any of the following? (Base: All providing regular support to children over 18, All aged 45-54 and supporting children over 18)

Q. Do you give any of the following types of financial support to...? (Base: All providing regular support to children over 18, All aged 45-54 and supporting children over 18)

Q. We’d now like you to imagine some situations and think about what you’d do. Which of the following do you most agree with? A. I think my adult children should stand on their own two feet financially. (Base: All providing regular support to children over 18)
Tough choices

Supporting others in your family can mean having to make some hard financial choices.

If people had to choose between paying for their children’s university/higher education over their own retirement fund, two-thirds (66%) would choose to support their children.

A similar proportion (65%) would prioritise paying for their elderly parents’ health and social care over paying into their own retirement fund.

This choice is even harder for people with both children and parents.

If they had to choose, people would prioritise their family over themselves

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Those with children (any age)</th>
<th>Those with parents</th>
<th>Those with children (any age) and parents</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Children’s university/higher education</td>
<td>66%</td>
<td>65%</td>
<td>50%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Own retirement fund</td>
<td>34%</td>
<td>35%</td>
<td>50%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Q. And, if you were in a situation where you could only pay for one of the following, what would you choose?
(Base: All with children of any age, All with parents, All with children any age and parents)
Financial ups and downs
Managing today

There are varying degrees of financial security among people giving regular financial support to someone in their family.

How financially secure do you feel today?

- Managing well or very well: 30%
- Managing quite well: 32%
- Just about managing: 29%
- Not managing at all well or just about managing with support from family or social benefits: 9%

Q. How financially secure do you feel today? (Base: All providing regular support to someone in their family)
Managing tomorrow?

The expectations of people at the two ends of the financial security spectrum suggest increasing polarisation.

Just over a quarter of people (26% and 27%) at both ends of the spectrum expect their situation to improve in the next three years.

Only just over one in ten (13%) of people supporting someone in their family and managing well or very well financially expect their situation to worsen in the next three years, compared to more than a third (37%) of those not managing at all or only managing with support from family or social benefits.

Q. Do you think that your financial position in the next 3 years will...?
(Base: All providing regular financial support to someone in their family and managing well or very well. All providing regular financial support to someone in their family and not managing at all well or just about managing with support from family or social benefits)
Unforeseen risks

Life carries many risks which can put people's financial security under pressure, especially those supporting someone in their family.

The most impactful risks they see are developing a serious illness such as cancer (49%) or their partner or a family member becoming seriously ill (40%).

Over a third say that becoming unemployed (34%) would impact their financial security.

Risks seen as most impactful to financial security

49%
Developing a serious illness
e.g. cancer

40%
Partner or family member becoming seriously ill

34%
Becoming unemployed

31%
Sharp increase in cost of living

30%
Increasing or unexpected bills

Q. Which of the following do you think would most impact your financial security if they were to happen to you? A. Ranked 1st, 2nd or 3rd
(Base: All providing regular financial support to someone in their family)
Knock-on effects

Unexpected life events can have knock-on financial consequences for the whole family.

More than a quarter (29%) of people supporting someone in their family say their dependants would not manage at all financially if they developed a long-term illness or disability. Just under a quarter (24%) of people believe their dependants would not manage at all if they themselves were unable to work.

Only just over one in five (21%) say their dependants would manage well if they had to significantly reduce their level of financial support to them.

Q. How well would those who depend on you manage financially if any of the following were to happen to you?
(Base: All providing regular financial support to someone in their family)
Many people supporting someone in the family do not have insurance in place if something unexpected were to happen to them.

Two-thirds (66%) do not have a policy that would pay them a regular sum if they had a serious illness or accident which prevented them from working.

Almost three in five (57%) do not have a policy that would pay them a lump sum if they contracted a serious illness such as cancer.

Just over half (51%) do not have a policy that would pay out a lump sum to take care of their family in the event of their death.

Among people providing regular financial support to someone in the family...

- 66% don’t have a policy that would pay them a regular sum if they had a serious illness or accident which prevented them from working.
- 57% don’t have a policy that would pay them a lump sum if they contracted a serious illness such as cancer.
- 51% don’t have a policy that would pay out a lump sum to take care of their family in the event of death.

Q. Finally, which of these insurance products or benefits do you currently have or would consider in the future? (Base: All proving regular financial support to someone in their family)
Let’s talk
Important conversations

Among people who are supporting someone in their family, those who are managing well financially are more likely to have had a conversation about long-term financial security should something happen to them, than those who are not managing well. Almost a quarter (24%) have never had a conversation about long-term financial security with anyone and only 31% who are parents have had this conversation with their children. Only 5% per cent have spoken with a professional adviser. Reluctance to talk about what might happen in the future may help to explain why most do not have insurance in place.

Among people providing support to someone in their family...

18% of those managing well financially have never had a conversation

35% of those not managing well financially have never had a conversation

Q. Have you spoken with any of the following about long-term financial security if something were to happen to you? A. Your children (Base: All with children of any age). A. Never had this conversation. A professional adviser (Base: All providing regular financial support to someone in their family). A. Never had this conversation (Base: All providing regular financial support to someone in their family and managing well or very well. All providing regular financial support to someone in their family and not managing at all well or just about managing with support from family or social benefits).

The Power of Protection  Facing the future
Triggering the conversation

Among people financially supporting someone in their family, there were different triggers for those who had a conversation about long-term financial security should something happen to them.

Discussing long-term financial security comes more naturally to some than others. Nearly a third (31%) initiated a conversation as a result of reviewing their financial or life plans.

For almost a third (30%) of them reaching a particular age when it became relevant was a key trigger for the conversation. For one in five (20%) who are parents, it was their children reaching a certain age that prompted them to have this conversation.

Top triggers for an important conversation

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Trigger</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Review of financial or life plans</td>
<td>31%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I reached a certain age where it became relevant</td>
<td>30%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I’m organised and like order in my life</td>
<td>24%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Children reached a certain age</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Q. And what led you to have this conversation [about long-term financial security if something were to happen to you]?
(Base: All providing regular support to someone in their family)
A. Children reached a certain age (Base: All with children of any age)
Futureproofing

When it comes to making specific provisions for the future, just over one in five (22%) of those supporting someone in their family have a legal guardian in place to look after any dependants should something happen to them. Even fewer have a power of attorney (17%) in place to make financial or legal decisions should anything happen to them or a will or testament (15%).

Almost a quarter (24%) who are parents have money set aside to leave to their children to ensure their financial security.

Among people providing regular financial support to someone in the family...

- 22% have a legal guardian in place
- 17% have a power of attorney
- 15% have a will or testament
- 24% have money to leave to their children to ensure their financial security (all with children of any age)

Q. Which of the following, if any, do you have in place now? (Base: All providing regular support to someone in their family)

Q. And which of these apply to you? (Base: All with children of any age)
Practical steps

Here are some important insights and practical actions drawn from the research findings, which may help people better prepare their family to face the future.

1. Identify your priorities
   73% of people say their family’s health and wellbeing is the most important thing to them for the future.
   Think about your priorities in life. Make sure you have a financial plan in place that addresses your needs as well as those of your family. Don’t neglect your own aspirations when planning for the future.

2. Assess your finances
   38% of people supporting someone financially feel they themselves are just about managing or not managing at all well.
   Consider how financially secure you feel. Think about whether any financial support you are giving to others is likely to increase or decrease in the future and if you need to update your financial plan.

3. Plan for the whole family
   79% of people supporting someone financially say their family would not manage well if they had to significantly reduce their support to them.
   Unexpected life events can have knock-on effects for the whole family. Bear this in mind when reviewing if you have enough financial protection in place.

4. Talk about the future
   82% of people who are supporting someone yet managing well financially have had a conversation about their long-term financial security should something happen to them.
   Make time to talk to your family about the future. Discuss what could happen to them if you experience a life-changing circumstance and what financial safeguards you have in place. If you need help, seek professional advice.
The research

The Power of Protection is an independent consumer research study conducted by Kantar TNS into global protection needs and trends. The study was commissioned by HSBC and provides insights into people’s concerns about the future and how they are protecting themselves financially, around the world.

This report, Facing the future, is the third in the series and represents the views of 13,122 people in 13 countries.

Since The Power of Protection study began in 2016, more than 30,000 people have been surveyed worldwide.

Survey

The findings in this report are based on a survey of 1,000 people in Hong Kong aged 25. The research was conducted online by Kantar TNS between March and May 2017.

Figures have been rounded to the nearest whole number.

The 13 countries and territories are:

- Argentina
- China
- France
- Hong Kong
- India
- Indonesia
- Malaysia
- Mexico
- Singapore
- Taiwan
- United Arab Emirates
- United Kingdom
- United States
About HSBC

HSBC Holdings plc, the parent company of the HSBC Group, is headquartered in London. The Group serves customers worldwide from around 3,900 offices in 67 countries and territories in Europe, Asia, North and Latin America, and the Middle East and North Africa. With assets of US$2,492bn at 30 June 2017, HSBC is one of the world’s largest banking and financial services organisations.

Legal

Information and/or opinions provided within this report constitute research information only and do not constitute an offer to sell, or solicitation of an offer to buy any financial services and/or products, or any advice or recommendation with respect to such financial services and/or products.
Disclaimer

The information contained in this report is not for sales purpose and it is for general reference only. Such information is not intended to constitute a recommendation or advise to any prospective customers and is not intended to provide professional advice and should not be relied upon in that regard.

Persons accessing these information are advised to obtain appropriate professional advice where necessary. Please arrange a financial planning review meeting to address your wealth management needs.